Kyung Hee University Law School

Towards Global Eminence

Kyung Hee University

Towards Global Eminence

Since its establishment in 1949, Kyung Hee University has developed into a comprehensive education system that ranges from kindergarten to graduate school. Three campuses actually constitute the University: the tree-lined 245-acre Seoul Campus, the 510-acre Global Campus situated along the shores of beautiful Singal Lake in Suwon, and the 12-acre Kwangnung Campus nestled in a serene environment to the north of Seoul. Dr. Young-Seek Choue, the Chancellor-Founder of the Kyung Hee University System, founded the university on the idea that the barriers that insulate academia from society must be broken, and he strove to impart to students not only academic knowledge, but also an awareness of their responsibilities to the global society. This belief was manifest in the University's founding philosophy of creating a "New Civilized World" and in the University motto, "Democratization of School, Ideas, and Living." By upholding his philosophy and maintaining his vision, the University has succeeded not only in international scholarly endeavors, but in bringing mankind one step closer to universal peace and understanding.

Introduction

Towards Global Eminence

Kyung Hee University Law School (KHLS) is situated in Seoul, the capital of the Republic of Korea. As a center of trade, finance and technological innovation, Seoul is a leading center of trade, finance and technological innovation in the global economy. Increasingly, Seoul is a magnet for foreign investment and multinational enterprises.

KHLS offers a first-rate professional education in legal sciences and strives to produce highly trained students whose legal expertise will contribute to societal well-being. To this end, the program focuses on the principles and practice of law in general, as well as on the specifics of Korean law. Our forward-looking curriculum includes contemporary areas of interest, such as intellectual property law, economic law and environmental law.

The economic realities of globalization require that KHLS graduates be well prepared for the complex legal relationships involved in diverse foreign legal cultures. As a result of the World Trade Organization's liberalization of international trade, law firms and business organizations have placed a higher demand than ever before on experts on international legal affairs. To better prepare for the internationalization of legal practice, KHLS has committed substantial resources to the study of international and comparative law. Students may take various courses in transnational and global legal studies focusing on business law. Students interested in international cross-border issues may apply for the Graduate School of International Legal Affairs at Seoul campus.

In addition to its regular curriculum, KHLS offers a variety of special opportunities including participation in moot court, observation tours to courts, mock bar examinations and group study during semester breaks. KHLS ultimately prepares students, upon completion of a master's degree, for doctoral law programs, the bar examination, the higher civil service examination and various careers in the legal profession.

The City

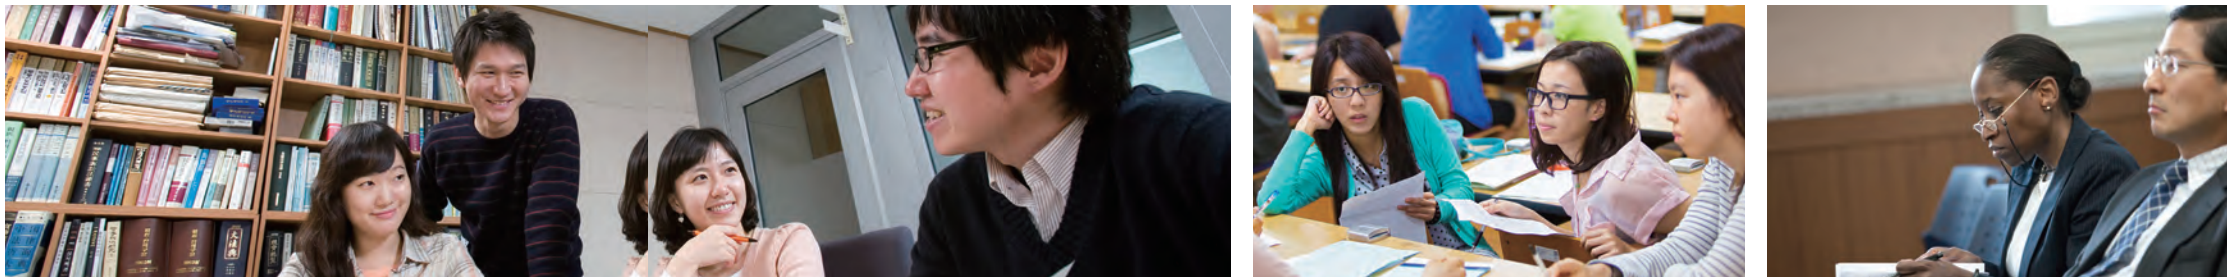

The School of Law is situated in Seoul, the capital of the Republic of Korea. Seoul means “capital” in archaic Korean language. With a population of more than ten million, Seoul today is a modern metropolis with many first-class hotels. It is a city of contrasts: bustling traffic runs alongside quiet palace gardens, and modern skyscrapers tower over centuries-old royal shrines. Four palaces from the Chosun Dynasty(1392-1897), all with lovely gardens still remaining, provide visitors the opportunity to enjoy the elegant architecture of ancient Korea.

Housing

- On Campus housing: There are two on-campus housing options at KHLS, both of which are available to international and Korean students. Sehwawon Dormitory, opened in March 2005, is modern and convenient. A room with a bathroom is shared by two students. The dormitory can accommodate 432 students in total. Preference will be given to students from the University's sister institutions abroad and Korean students who show high academic achievement. Sehjinwon Law School Dormitory opened in September 2009 with the most up-to-date facilities and can accommodate 64 student in total.
- Off-Campus Housing: Although students are strongly encouraged to live in a dormitory. One-and Two -room studio apartment can be rented on a monthly basis. These apartment can also be leased using a monthly rental key money system known as joen-sae. Boarding houses are also off-campus housing options. Some boarding houses include meals and laundry service. The cost depends on the number of people per room, the number of meals, and the type of laundry service. Private boarding houses in Korea require a deposit, which carries from 10 to 20 times the actual monthly rent. However, this deposit is returned at the end of the lease.
